STOCKS RESIST PROFIT SELLING

Volume Drops After Brisk Spree at Start: U. S. Steel Leads Metal Upswing.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 8.—Further profit selling lowered the stock market temperature a bit today, but confidence kept the list generally in a resistant area.

Dealership dropped appreciably after a fast opening on the advance.

Labor apprehension appeared to be slowly evaporating as a market influence and fairly optimistic business news encouraged buyers in many instances.

Grain futures were given a lift. Other commodities were uneven. Bonds, especially those in the rail section, displayed an improved tone.

U. S. Steel led the steel division on a forward jump around noon but slipped later, along with others.

Up as much as a point or so at the time were Wheeling Steel, Republic, U. S. Rubber, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, American Smelting and Union Carbide.

Expectations that terms of the proposed merger between Chesapeake Corp. and Allegheny Corp. would be made public, probably later in the day, brought a rally in stocks of these companies.

Although the carriers were indifferent, early estimates of last week's freight loadings placed the total above $20,000 cars, a top for the year.

Profit statements, with that of Loew's conspicuous, did much to sustain speculative and investment forces.

Boardman's sentiment found another prop in the weekly survey of "Iron Age" which said strike-bound steel companies were gradually getting back to near normal operations.

The review added that steel consumption was continuing high in most all-hires except in the automobile industry. Cheerful signs were seen in indications of a revival of railroad equipment buying and in advancing scrap prices.

Holders of utilities studied figures of the Edison Electric Institute showing a slight net contraction of power production for the week ended July 3.

DISTRICT OFFICE OF NYA LOCATED HERE

Mrs. Blanche Knachel in Charge of Work in Six Counties

The NYA program in Marion and the surrounding counties is being directed from an office here under the supervision of Mrs. Blanche Knachel, district supervisor. The local office which had been in operation for some time was moved to the new quarters July 1 when the NYA program was reorganized. Mrs. Knachel, from her office on the second floor of the C. J. C. A. building, directs NYA activity in Marion, Morgan, Wayne, Jackson, Crawford and Knox counties. Previously, the headquarters for this district was in Toledo and Mrs. Knachel was in charge of all NYA activity in the district. She is directing the program in Marion through the local office which is located in the Sandusky district while Marion and surrounding counties are now included in central Ohio region which is supervised by a District Supervisor of Columbus.

At present in Marion and in other counties under Mrs. Knachel's direction, 15 young men and women compose the NYA staff. Of that number 15 are located in Marion county, 15 each in Jackson and Morgan counties, 15 in Crawford and three each in Wayne and Knox. Chiefly among their activities is the directing of the ground programs for college in the district. Others are employed in the construction and repair of homes and buildings for paroled and in operating nursery schools.

PROSPECT GROUP MEETS IN DELAWARE

Prospect group met in Delaware on July 8. Mrs. Knachel and daughter, Mrs. Knachel, entertained the group at their home. They also celebrated the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Downing. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Jones and family, Mr. and Mrs. Watkins, and Mrs. John J. Watkins, and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Hutton Ackley and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Smith and Mrs. Sarah Phillips.

Your Health

Tonsils

WHAT SHOULD I DO ABOUT MY TONSILS? This is a question which is asked by many people. The tonsils are a part of the body's defense system and are located in the throat. They are made up of lymphatic tissue and are designed to catch and destroy germs that enter the body through the mouth. In many cases, the tonsils become enlarged and inflamed, a condition known as tonsillitis. This can be caused by a variety of factors, including infection, irritation, and overuse. If you experience frequent tonsillitis, it may be necessary to have your tonsils removed. This is a common surgical procedure and is usually performed under general anesthesia. After the surgery, you will need to rest and take care of your throat. In most cases, the removal of the tonsils will prevent future infections and improve your overall health.

Many people are concerned about the possibility of having their tonsils removed. It is important to understand that the tonsils are not essential for life, and their removal will not weaken the body's immune system. In fact, the removal of the tonsils can actually improve the body's ability to fight off infections. If you are experiencing frequent tonsillitis, it is worth considering the possibility of having your tonsils removed. Consult with your doctor to determine if this is the right decision for you. The procedure is a simple one, and the recovery time is usually short. After the surgery, you will need to rest and take care of your throat. In most cases, the removal of the tonsils will prevent future infections and improve your overall health.

Answers to Health Queries

Q—My child has a sore throat and his tonsils are enlarged. Should I have them removed?
A—If the child has a sore throat and his tonsils are enlarged, it is likely that he has tonsillitis. This is a common condition and is usually caused by a viral or bacterial infection. In most cases, the tonsils will return to their normal size after the infection has cleared up. However, if the child experiences frequent episodes of tonsillitis, it may be necessary to have the tonsils removed. This is a common surgical procedure and is usually performed under general anesthesia. After the surgery, the child will need to rest and take care of his throat. In most cases, the removal of the tonsils will prevent future infections and improve the child's overall health.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

It is a common experience for many people to suffer from backache. This is often caused by tired kidneys, which are unable to filter out the waste products from the blood. This leads to a buildup of toxins in the body, which can cause a variety of symptoms, including backache, fatigue, and weakness. The good news is that there is a simple and effective way to relieve backache caused by tired kidneys. This is by taking a course of treatment that is designed to rejuvenate the kidneys and improve their ability to filter out the waste products from the blood. This treatment is usually performed over a period of several weeks and involves the use of a variety of techniques, including massage, acupuncture, and herbal remedies. After the treatment, you should experience a significant improvement in your backache and overall health.

GOV. DAVEY STOPS HERE ENROUTE FROM VACATION

...for Anything," Says State Executive Taking Lunch at Hotel Harding.

Gov. Davey, returning from his vacation, stopped here today for lunch at the Hotel Harding. He was accompanied by a number of his staff, including his secretary, Miss Mary E. O'Connell, and his personal driver, Mr. J. J. O'Connell. The governor was seen leaving the hotel at 1:30 p.m. for his residence in Columbus.

When asked to comment on the gubernatorial election, the governor said: "I am not a candidate for anything—I don't suppose, however, the public will believe that."

The governor and Mrs. Davey visited with the waiters who served them in the grill room. "What do you think about the election?" the governor asked her. He smiled when she confessed she wasn't very well posted on the strike situation. He complimented her on her service during the luncheon and thumbed his pockets for a card, bearing the gold seal which he presented to her with a tip.

When she handed him his sales tax coupons for the luncheon, he gave her a quick look, smiled and tucked them into a pocket.

His patrol escort, in a top-down touring car, cleared a path through traffic for the governor's limousine, a 16-cylinder Cadillac.

For luncheon, the governor and his wife both chose cold cuts of meat with sliced chicken, potato salad, iced cantaloupes and coffee.

They arrived in Marion about 2:15 and left about 40 minutes later.

CCC ENLISTMENT SET FOR MONDAY

Delay Ordered Until July 12,
Deputy Agent Says.

Marion county's July enlistment in the civilian conservation corps originally set for tomorrow will be delayed until Monday, July 12, it was announced today by Walter Guthrie, deputy county selection agent.

The county's quota for the July enlistment has been set at 15, and those who have applied for enlistment are requested to report at the courthouse next Monday morning at 7:30 o'clock. The youths will be taken to Mansfield, where they will undergo thorough physical examinations, before enrolling for CCC camps.

Robert Kremer, director of the CCC, announced today that the program for the first quarter of the fiscal year which began July 1 calls for the operation of 40 camps in Ohio, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington, D. C. The drainage of private land in Wood, Deane and Hancock counties is under the supervision of C. C. Eyo, a former Marion county sheriff.

FIREMEN ANSWER TWO ALARMS HERE

A short circuit in a battery cable was blamed for a minor automobile fire in a car owned by G. C. Whalen, of 120 East Washington street, at 9:15 o'clock last night while the car was parked near 151 South Main street. The cable was disconnected and the blaze smothered by firemen who answered the call in the chief's car. Damage was estimated at $2.

At 10:01 o'clock last night firemen in the chief's car were called to the Lennon Furniture Co. at 231 West Center street, to extinguish a blaze thought to have been caused by a short circuit in a motor of an electric washing machine. Damage, confined to the washer, was estimated at $10.

Marriage Meddlers

BY ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Learns That Princess Ollina and Noel Are Working On Opera.

"YES, I have," I said slowly when Lillian asked me if I had any other facts in fit in with the theory that Philip Vertizen was double-crossing his young daughter-in-law in his promise to give her the leading role in my play.

"In the first place, he has told Mary that she must go to New York and cannot see Noel at all either during rehearsals or during the first part of the play's run—except for the first night, when he will be permitted to share in the reception to her."

"That proves absolutely nothing," she said with decision. "For Phil always keeps his stars secluded, as you know. I don't believe he has ever allowed any of them to see husband or sweet-heart during rehearsal. He always says he wants no happy moments to interfere with the work of his stars. They can have all the money they want, simply wallow in it. His theory is that they act all the better for heavy-bribe."

"Perhaps he's trying to provide the heartbreak for Mary from a purely philanthropic standpoint. I ventured this, but Lillian snapped me up quickly.

Tells of Ollina

"I wouldn't put it past him," she retorted. "But I'd have to have other data than his keeping her away from Noel while she's rehearsing. Is there anything else?"

"Only the matter of Ollina helping Noel with that light opera of his."

She was instantly galvanized into attention.

"Say that again," she directed, and I related what Mary had told me of the aid Princess Ollina, an accomplished musician, was giving Noel while Mary was running errands for the royal fugitives at the insistence of her father-in-law.

"That seemed to be the chief reason for his annoyance when he came to see if she were here," I added. "He complained that she had omitted to do several errands for Queen Olga. Mary told me that Ollina had promised to do them for her, but evidently Mr. Vertizen did not approve of the substitution."

Marriage Impossible

"Naturally," she commented. "That complex of his wouldn't permit him to think of a princess running errands."

"I wish he'd indulge his complex by marrying the poor exiled queen," I said tartly. "and let the young people alone."

"It would be an ideal solution," she agreed, "but just at this juncture, I do not believe either Phil or Queen Olga would wish such an answer to the problem."

I looked at her in astonishment, and she smiled indulgently at me. "Take time out and use your brain cells," she counseled. "In the first place, there's nothing so hide-bound as those old world prejudices of rank. Remember, Phil, to Queen Olga, is simply a rich and generous American. Marriage to him would not enter her brain. And even if she does discover his identity, the bar sinister still stands in his way.

Absolute rot, of course, the silliest stuff imaginable, but you'll find it's very real to Olga. And I think old Phil won't find it very easy going if he tries any shenanigans about breeding up

Rev. William Announces Topics for Rest of Week.

Sermon subjects for the remainder of the week at the camp meeting being held in Bucyrus were announced today by Rev. Karl F. Wittman, Toledo evangelist conducting the meeting.

Rev. Wittman will preach on "Praying Again Ancient Ways," tonight, "A Man Up a Tree" Friday night, "Where Am the Dead?" Saturday night, "Prophecy," Sunday afternoon, and "The Handwriting on the Wall," Sunday night.

Services are held nightly at 7:45 p.m. with a senior service held each Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Delegates attending from towns in a radius of nearly 100 miles. The meeting is being held in a tabernacle on South Poplar street. The Anderson trio from McDonald, O., will furnish vocal and instrumental music at the afternoon services Sunday. Special music at all services is provided by the Wittman family, comprised of Rev. and Mrs. Wittman, their daughter Rachel, and Karl F. Wittman Jr., a six-year-old radio artist. A public address system is used to enable those outside the tabernacle to hear the service.

Rev. Wittman conducted a revival in Marion three years ago.

PATROL ARRESTS WOMAN DRIVER

Mrs. Elsie Anderson, 40, of 288 East Church street, was arrested last night on a charge of drunken driving by highway patrolmen from the Marion substation. She was taken into custody on the north side, one and one-half miles north of the junction of routes 4 and 23 about 6:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Anderson pleaded not guilty at an arraignment before Municipal Judge Martin this morning. Her bond was fixed at $300 and hearing was set for July 15 at 3 o'clock. She was being held at the city prison this morning pending arrangements to furnish bond.

Blow by Blow.

With the court packing issue thrown open to emotional debate this week, these few facts will help to make many words meaningful.

The fight on court packing was initiated last Feb. 5 by President Roosevelt when he made a proposal to reform the judiciary. The plan was in violation of the party platform. It was framed without the counsel of party leaders and submitted without their consent.

An amazed and frightened opposition sprang up to block what looked at first like an Americanized version of the coup d'état. The President and his advisers were astonished that they should be encountering resistance. Plainly, they thought everything was in the bag.

Mr. Roosevelt tried to restore his severely strained prestige by radio speeches favoring his plan on March 4 and March 5. The response was a further tightening of opposition. On May 1 he revealed his mind by an angry refusal even to consider a compromise.

The supreme court, during all this time, had been at work. Its calendar was up to date, it had removed itself as an obstacle to the new deal legislative program. It was commonly said that the President was getting the result he wanted, but without establishing the dangerous principle of executive dominance over an independent branch of the government.

On June 11 the majority report of the senate judiciary committee condemned the President and his proposal in language as strong that it was likened to a bill of impeachment. Defense for court packing had become so weak that no minority report, defending the proposal, was made.

Yet, though beaten fairly and squarely according to the rules of procedure, the Rooseveltians now threaten to cram a substitute measure down the country's throat—a substitute measure which is the real thing in a flimsy disguise. It is not a question of what the country wants, but of what the Rooseveltians want to give it, apparently.

Their strategy calls for crushing the opposition under the legislative steamroller they control, thanks to patronage, to WPA money and to the party machinery. Against this juggernaut, there is only one defense, the last resort of legislators when they see the steamroller coming toward them—the filibuster.

The public has found it hard to decide just what game the new dealers are playing with the government. In the event of a bold drive to impose their will on a recalcitrant congress in the form of Mr. Roosevelt's court packing bill, at least one thing will be cleared up. The game no longer will even look like representative democracy.

Anti-German Propaganda.

During her visit in this country, Viscountess Astor, American born member of the British parliament, made many keen comments on the way things are going here. One is especially interesting.

Rising anti-German sentiment in this country, she warned, may have serious consequences. "If the Jews are behind this propaganda, they've gone too far. And it will react on them."

The cause of Lady Astor's alarm, evidently, is her belief that Great Britain, France and Germany must work together to maintain peace in Europe. They, meaning particularly Great Britain, will need the moral support of the United States but it seems to be developing a strong feeling against one of the triumvirate, Germany.

This is, of course, too intricate a puzzle of international influence to be approached by any but the best qualified observers. It is possible, however, to say with complete conviction that anti-German sentiment in the United States, to the extent that it has appeared, is not the genuine kind of feeling which existed during the World War, if that's what Lady Astor has in mind.

It is not directed against Germany, but against the political masters of the German people. Though the sentiment undoubtedly is fed by resentment of Jewish persecution, it could and does exist independently of that source.

Americans have seen in the Hitler regime the kind of political reaction which instinct tells them, they will fall victim to unless, keenly alert to their danger, they can circumvent it by pre-emption. Lady Astor from an international point of view, may be right, but the issue as Americans see it is national. The dictatorship they fear is illustrated most clearly for them in the excesses of the Nazi regime.

It can gag the mouths of its American

The Rights of The Minority

BY DAVID LAWRENCE.

Copyright, 1937, by The Marion Star

WASHINGTON, July 8.—How can workmen be protected in their free access to the federal labor laws which allow an employer and a majority of the employees to make a voluntary agreement which closes out all who do not belong to the union prescribed by the majority?

This question, commonly referred to as the "closed shop" issue, has already been discussed and will continue to produce complications. For while, on the one hand, the individual worker is told by federal statute that he and his fellow-workmen can bargain with their employer and that the employer cannot force them to belong to a labor union, the same federal law says that when an employer and a majority group of his employees get together, they can close out the minority.

The average man will find it difficult to explain this contradiction. The words of the Wagner law, on the one hand, attempt to resolve it, but the conflict remains.

The Wagner act, to begin with, makes it an "unfair labor practice" for an employer to refuse to hire a man because he is not a member of a labor union or because he is not a member of the union existing in his plant. But it goes on to say that this duty not to discriminate has an exception to it, and this is when a closed shop agreement has been made by an employer with a majority of his employees.

This use of the majority rule idea has been little understood, but it is only fair to say that Senator Wagner told the senate about it when his bill was up for consideration in May, 1935. He is quoted in the official record as saying:

"While outlawing the organization that is interfered with by the employer, this bill does not establish the closed shop or even encourage it. The much-discussed closed shop provision merely states that nothing in any federal law shall be held to illegal or the confirmation of voluntary closed shop agreements between employers and workmen. This law is necessary in order to prevent rejection of those mistaken interpretations which have held that congress intended to outlaw the closed shop when it enacted section 7-A of the national recovery act."

"I had no belief for or against the closed shop, but there are some who believe that it is a device which at times may be necessary to advance and preserve the living standards of workers. It is legal in many states and there is no reason why congress should make it illegal in those places where public policy now sustains it."

Wagner's Explanation

Clearly, no individual can be deprived of his job lawfully because of union membership, but not so clearly he can be deprived when an employer and a majority of his employees want to close him out. Thus do the rights of the minority disappear and Senator Wagner admits it.

"Majority rule recognizes minority rights. It does not ever imply that an employer can be forced to join a union, except through the traditional method of a closed shop agreement with them."

"And since in the absence of such an agreement, the bill specifically prevents discrimination against anyone either for belonging or not belonging to a union, the majority will be quite powerless to make an agreement more favorable to themselves than to the minority who remain without."

Under these circumstances, can an employer be forced to make a closed shop agreement which will bar from his plant any out-liers of a given union? The New York statute affirms the fact that closed shop agreements must be voluntarily made and that nothing in the law compels an employer to make any such agreement. There are many quotations from the debate in the senate which indicate that, while the employer must recognize the representative of the majority of his workmen and must meet with them to discuss their proposals, he need never agree to a closed shop agreement. To do so involuntarily or under specific duress makes the agreement itself of doubtful legality.

By refusing to make a closed shop agreement, the employer is really seeking to protect the free access to jobs of all who may apply to him in the future for work. He is endeavoring to preserve his right to hire or fire employees and take in person who he may happen to be members of the existing majority group.

But when such a right is exercised solely for the purpose of undermining the majority union in a plant and such purpose can be proved, it is an unfair labor practice and prohibited under the Wagner act.

When a labor union makes a demand for a closed shop which is not accepted by the employer, it is going something like a strike or a lockout. It is a demand for the Wagner law when the union insists upon calling a strike and exerting economic pressure to secure acceptance of that demand.

This point will be debated in the court of public opinion particularly, as it involves the right to strike for the privilege of discriminating against fellow-workers a privilege sought to be safeguarded through accepted freedom of choice by the individual. It is not a group of workmen who wish to force a closed shop agreement in effect seeking a union monopoly, which Senator Wagner himself has said is not the purpose of the law he sponsored.

Synonym is Monopoly

The true synonym for "closed shop" is monopoly, and under the terms of the Wagner law, it might well be called "legalized monopoly." When the closed shop agreement is obtained, under pressure of a strike or threatened strike, it can hardly, of course, be called a voluntary agreement. So it would seem that a workman who is deprived of a job might have the right to sue in the civil courts both the labor union leaders and the employers for setting up such an arrangement which deprives him and the other citizens of their opportunity to work.

An employer, of his own initiative, does not have the liberty to force upon his employees a closed shop agreement, and if he does, he is in violation of the law. The union men, and the union similarly do not have an unqualified right to force a closed shop upon him. Congress can, if it likes and so can the states, act to prevent the making of closed shop contracts under duress or the making of any contracts which tend to exclude substantially large numbers of persons from obtaining employment.

Land of Vendetta

By F. C. M. JAHN

United Press Correspondent.

VIENNA, July 8.—Vendetta continues to be practiced in the Italian mountains despite severest measures taken by the various governments there to suppress this centuries-old gruesome custom.

"Eye for eye, and tooth for tooth" is the supreme law among the hardy mountaineers there, who extend it not only to the second and third generations of the killer but also to his remote relatives and to his entire village.

An intervention by authorities counts nothing in these regions. The law of vengeance remains unquenched, even if the murderer has been executed under normal legal procedure in the meantime; it is considered a sacred rule that a kinsman of the slain must kill the slayer, or, if this man can not be reached, because he has died a natural death, or for some other reason, one of the latter's kin must avenge him.

The latest case of vendetta, or, as it is called there, "Fies", was reported from Southern Yugoslavia, where Selman, a peasant from the village of Belintz, killed a shepherd, Nizar, from Belintz, by two shots in a long mountain pasture, because during a drunken brawl between peasants from the two villages Nizar's brother had stabbed to death Selman's uncle.

After the murder, Selman returned to Belintz, only to announce triumphantly that the "blood law" had been executed, and then he went into the mountains to seek a hiding place.

Anticipating revenge by the Belintz folks, Belintz was in a state of alarm. Doers and widows, as well as children, women and children were not permitted to leave the village, and the men went about armed up to their teeth.

The only alternative to "Fies" is "Besas", a sort of "God's truth." It is solemn practice because, aside from humiliating ceremonies on the part of the slayer's kin, it involves the payment of 50 gold pieces "blood money," an enormous sum among the poor mountain peasants and shepherds.

Warring Parties Meet

It through friendly mediation by a third village, "Besas" has been agreed upon, an appointment is made between the warring parties to meet in a spot midway between the two villages.

Thereafter, an elderly man, carrying a noose around his neck, the chief of the slayer's family, enters the other party's camp, where he is met by the head of the rival tribe with the following formula:

"Thou wast our enemy, thy kin were our enemies, thy village with all its houses, with all that lives and thrives there, were our enemies."

Then the peasant presents the blood money which is carefully counted. If it is found in order, the chief of the offended village solemnly pronounces:

"Henceforth we shall be friends," and then the entire litany is repeated in form of blessings instead of curses.

Kisses are exchanged, and a meal with dancing and drinking seals the restored peace.

Jap War Target

By JAMES E. BROWN

International News Service Correspondent.

MOSCOW, July 8.—In the event of a Japanese-American war, Japanese agents could blow up the Panama canal in short time.

This is the statement of Boris Dranov in his book "Japanese Espionage," which was published here recently. It is based on a carefully studied of the methods of Tokyo's secret service in all parts of the globe.

The treatise, evidently carefully prepared, professes to give the complete history of Japan's espionage system, along with the names of the leaders, and case studies of their work or accomplishments in various countries.

Of the Pan-American trial, which recently ended such a sensation in Washington, Dranov writes:

"Exceptionally clever was the work of Japanese agents in this instance. When Farnsworth was exposed, the American high command was hastily forced to reveal all prearranged secret fighting tactics and to rewrite all secret codes."

Further along, in the section dealing with spy activities in the United States, he adds:

"Japanese spies, posing as fishermen, have photographed every important American harbor on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Not only that, but the Panama canal because of its strategic importance today is honey-combed with agents ready to act instantly in the event of an emergency."

Concerning Japanese activities in the British empire, Dranov asserts:

"Most of Tokyo's work has been limited to the navy and to war industries, but there is little about Britain's navy that they do not know, and there are few English military secrets which they are not acquainted with."

Discussing the actual methods of the Japanese spy service, he declares there is a regular school known as the Black Dragon academy which trains men for this work. Among graduates of this school Dranov charges are:

Former Prime Minister Hirota, Former Minister of Foreign Affairs Aris, Former Ambassador to Moscow Ohta, Present Ambassador to Berlin Mutsaers, The head of the Black Dragon academy, he says, is Toiyama, "one of the back-stage dictators of Japan."

But this school, he adds, has a subsidiary in Manchuria created for the special purpose of dealing with Russian affairs.

Two ex-officers of the Czarist Russian Imperial Army, Lieutenant Semenov and General Ristikhin, he says, are "professors" along with the Japanese, General Ando, Major Onizaki and Captain Suzuki.

The men trained in this school, according to Dranov, are mainly Russian refugees. When they have completed their course, he states, they are equipped with false passports and sent back to the Soviet Union.

The fact that Mr. John D. Rockefeller had the foundation of the Rockefeller fortune in Cleveland should be a fact of interest to Ohioans. Born at Richford, N. Y., on July 8, 1839, brought to Cleveland when he was 12 years old, he received most of his formal education in the public schools there, and at the age of 16 became a clerk.

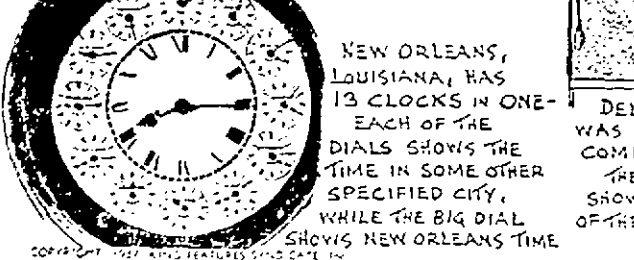

At 19 he entered the commission business with a partner, and later with the admission of other partners, and under the name Andrews, Clark & Co., engaged in the oil business. Later a new company was formed and called William Rockefeller & Co., after the admission of William Rockefeller to the firm. Thus began the Standard Oil company.

Value of Miss Earhart's Flight

BY WALTER LIPPMANN

I CANNOT quite remember when Miss Earhart undertook her flight with some practical purpose in mind, say to demonstrate something or other about aviation which will make it a little easier for commercial passengers to move more quickly around the world. There are those who seem to think that an enterprise like hers must have some such justification, that without it there was no good reason for taking such grave risks.

But in truth Miss Earhart needs no such justification, that without it there was no good reason for taking such grave risks.

But in truth Miss Earhart needs no such justification. The world is a better place to live in because it contains human beings who will give up ease and security and stake their own lives in order to do what they themselves think worth doing. They help to offset the much larger number who are ready to sacrifice the ease and the security and the very lives of others in order to do what they want done. No end of synthetic heroes stilt the stage, great bold men in bulletproof vests surrounded by squads of armed guards, demonstrating their courage by terrorizing the weak and defenseless. It is somehow reassuring to think that there are also men and women who take the risks themselves, without the aid of their fellow beings, but against the immensity and the violence of the natural world, who are brave without cruelty to others and impatient with an idea that disciplines all who contemplate it.

The best things of mankind are as useless as Amelia Earhart's adventure. They are the things that are undertaken not for some definite measurable result, but because some one, not counting the consequences, is moved by curiosity, the love of excellence, a point of honor, the compulsion to invent or to make or to understand. In such persons mankind overcomes the inertia which would keep it earthbound forever in its habitual ways. They have in them the free and useless energy with which alone men surpass themselves.

Such energy cannot be planned and managed and made purposeful, or weighed by its social consequences. It is wild and it is free. But all the heroes, the saints and the seers, the explorers and the creators partake of it. They do not know what they discover. They do not know where their impulse is taking them. They can give no account in advance of where they are going or explain completely where they have been. They have been possessed for a time with an extraordinary passion which is unintelligible in ordinary terms.

Comfortable and Profitable Jobs

BY D. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 6.—There are thousands of men in New York who make an unusually good living, serving as superintendents of large apartment houses. Many are men who have risen from janitor to less opulent surroundings. And some have been engineers. In many instances they are furnished comfortable apartments in the fine buildings. And thus are they able to live in the most desirable areas often prohibitive.

Their salaries are not so high—$150 a month is about top and the average is $95 a month. But that becomes mighty sweet. Too, in the more opulent areas superintendents have been able through special attention to important tenants to secure market-wise tips of great value.

One who is learning his job in detail now often has been backed by building contractors in erecting large structures in which they acquire a substantial interest. Three large Park Avenue apartment houses are owned by former superintendents.

New York parks on Sunday are sprinkled with Japanese who invariably carry cameras. In fact, the Japanese are the most conspicuous of the Kodakists. It is all right, of course, but Americans in Japan with cameras are under immediate suspicion and if they take pictures are whisked to jail.

Dog owners: The intelligence of dogs is ever astonishing. Our Boston is always able to sense the coming of company, and will go to the hall, stretch and watch the front door as the hawk the chicken. Often we have tried throwing him off trail by putting on half and wharf as though going out, but the trick will not work. Too, there was that evening when we expected a rather distinguished couple from a nearby city. The dog, however, did not occupy his accustomed place to watch. And a half hour after the dinner appointment there came a telegram the guests had missed the train.

Age Pensions Nothing New

Indian Tribe Has Aided C. Members for Centuries

BY NED RUSSELL

(United Press Correspondent)

TUCSON, Ariz., July 6.—Father Bonaventure Oblatas, a deeply tanned priest, who has arrived among the Papago Indians more than 27 years, believes they solemnly obeyed orders to care for their aged should exempt them from provisions of the national civil service act.

"No Papago ever starved," said in explaining the custom, Papago custom of relieving the people of worry about their old people.

Virtually all Papagos are of the opinion, he says, that the people of worry about their old people.

Father Bonaventure, who has lived among the Papagos for 27 years, and who understands the customs, wants and spiritual life of the Indians, compares the white man because of the Papago aim to teach and foster independence.

Despite the fact that Papagos have 13 communities in the area, he insists they still are in contact.

"They want it known and recognized that they were able to live independently of the white man," he says.

Father Bonaventure claims that Papagos when the work of the Catholic church and the government still was in its infancy.

He started working among the Indians at Topawa, where he erected them in constructing their first seven schools. His work now centers at the Papago reservation, where he has 15 teachers, a large number of Indians and 30 chapels.

Father Bonaventure has been in the Papago cause before federal officials in Washington many times each time has accomplished his mission. He was a member of the committee that actually saved the reservation.

Federal Aid Probed

He said the priests of the reservation have started everything on a road program. The government has responded readily to all suggestions, he said.

Father Bonaventure's career among the Indians has been one of having experienced hardships, trials and hardships.

He has suffered from hardships over the hot desert sands. He has helped energetic tribes down to a gun battle between a band of thieves and a band of Indians.

A native of Portland, Ore., Father Bonaventure came here from Oakland, Cal., in answer to a call for priests to work among the Indians. He originally intended to do missionary work in China.
